

Gordana Juric-Sekhar, MD, PhD

Dr. Juric-Sekhar has specialized in the fields of anatomic pathology and neuropathology. She trained at the University of Zagreb, and the University of Washington, and until recently worked at the University of Washington School of Medicine Department of Pathology. She is currently a Clinical Associate Professor in the Department of Medical Education and Clinical Sciences at the Elson S. Floyd College of Medicine Washington State University. She has lectured and taught extensively both inside the US and internationally. Her research work has focused on Raman spectroscopic techniques in identification of brain tumors. Currently, she has a major interest in the field of digital pathology and its applications to medicine. She is married and has two children. In addition to her family, her major outside interests include tennis, outdoor activities, and travel.